Terra Nova's Laserlite Competition is officially the lightest one/two person two-skin tent available. With an advertised minimum weight of 860g the model I used weighed a tad under 940g, including carbon fibre pegs and poles. I've found the Laserlite Competition to be a remarkably roomy solo tent with a lot of porch space. Initial concerns about its stormworthiness have proved groundless – I've replaced the guying system with a better arrangement and believe the Laserlite is probably as stormproof as my long-loved and trusted Hilleberg Akto. Indeed, Steve Perry spent a whole Scottish winter in a slightly heavier Laserlite with no problems at all.
