

Wild Country Aspect 3

THE WILD Country Aspect 3 is a quality two-pole tunnel that uses a unique clip to hold the outer to the corner joints (which are angled to increase useable headroom). The Aspect features a rear door that opens direct on to the inner tent's own L-shaped back door. The inner door has a mesh upper and, besides acting as a convenient exit for whoever is kipping at the rear, the outer door can be clipped up for extra ventilation.

The door leads to a big porch with room for a couple of rucksacks. We're not keen to bring wet gear into an inner tent, but a detachable gear pan keeps things clean and tidy.

Camping says We tested the smaller Aspect 2 back in November last year and we were very impressed. So when the larger three-berth was released we were anxious to get it out in the field. This is definitely a tent to check out if you are in the market for a technical lightweight tent, but one that still offers you plenty of space.
